No. 42.

Editorial.

THIS is the second winter of the war, and the School still continues to turn out comforts for the soldiers. The storeroom is kept well supplied, and we are able to send socks, mufflers, etc., to a good many regiments, and bandages and splints to a number of hospitals. In spite of this extra work the Golden Rule and the Missionary Societies are not allowed to suffer. A collection has been made to procure more wool for the Golden Rule Society, and a good deal of money is coming in for our Indian orphan.

The certificate which serves as a frontispiece to this number shows that our work has now been brought into the new County Association under Lord Shuttleworth. We are all much gratified by this official recognition.

This term is always the time when the different Societies have most meetings. In spite of the war we are able to hold very enjoyable evenings, and all the Societies are now in full swing, so that nearly all the Fridays are engaged for meetings long in advance.

Although more articles were sent in for the magazine this time, we could very well do with a few more. When Miss Burstall has said that she is proud of her School magazine, the girls ought to try harder to make the paper worthy of her appreciation.

Many old girls are working in banks, having filled the places of men who have gone to the front. This is a very practical way of serving our country, and the School ought to be proud of these girls, as well as of those who are doing such good work in Red Cross Hospitals.
